Dear Parent/Carer,

Curriculum- Webpage

This half term we have been working with children in classes about the NSPCC 'Talk Pants' campaign. This has been used throughout the school for the last few years and we have revisited it with all of the children this half term. On the school website, you will find useful resources, including a very catchy video, that will help to inform you of what the children have been learning in school- it would be most helpful to us if you could reinforce the messages from the PANTS campaign at home. The resources can be found on the PSHE page of the website- either click on or scan the QR code.

In addition to this, we have also been continuing to work hard on our handwriting skills using the Kinetic Letters scheme. The lady who wrote the scheme, Margaret Williamson, will even be visiting our school in the next couple of weeks to see the impact that it has had on our young writers and to improve our teaching of handwriting even further. Over on our school website, we have a thorough explanation of the scheme and even have resources available that you will be able to use to support your child's handwriting at home. These are on a password protected area of the website as we have purchased them and are only allowed to share them with parents of this school. The password is Handwriting. Please do not share this password or any of the resources with others outside of our school community as this would breach copyright rules. Please click on or scan the QR code.

Please remember that when viewing our school website, www.warstones.co.uk, from a mobile device, it is preferable that you turn your screen to landscape. This shows the website in a more organised view, like you would see on a desktop version.

Thank you for your continued support,

Mr A Powell
